I'm not terribly familiar with Flutter, but looking at the code it seems like that's the way you would have to go about it. [From the psychotherapy of affective disorders]. The authors give an overview of the psychotherapy of affective disorders, but also of the literature and the practice in which they have had the chance to practise themselves. They claim that contemporary psychoanalysis is of great value, but they point out that it can be modified in view of further scientific and therapeutical progress, and this applied to the treatment of affective disturbances in general. The authors believe that the psychotherapist has to establish from the beginning a close dialogue with the patient in order to understand as best he/she can the cause of the disturbance and the patient's reaction.

Marco Antonio Solari Marco Antonio Solari (born November 23, 1969 in Gorizia) is an Italian writer, former journalist and journalist, author of three autobiographical books. Biography He started his studies at the State Economic Institute of the Italian National Research Council, graduating in political sciences at the University of Udine. He then moved to Milan, living there from 1985 to 1998. From 2001, as an editor of the television channel Pubblico Attività, a journalist at RAI and a writer at the Gazzetta dell'Italia, he changed his focus from the economic market to social and political issues. He is a former journalist for La Stampa, La Repubblica and La Nuova Giulia Magazine, where he first worked as a researcher before becoming an editor from 1997 to 2000. Since 2002 he has written articles for several Italian newspapers, his work has been published in the weekly magazine Tempo, and he's a correspondent of the newspaper Repubblica. He has written three autobiographic books: Palimpsesto (2006), Gomorra, un paese, due repubbliche e un candidato (2008) and Memorie di un gomorra: Scrivilo a mano (2017). Autobiographies In October 2006, the first of his three autobiographic books, Palimpsesto, was published. The book is the author's autobiography, and it's, in a way, the story of the "Italians before it all became complicated". The main characters are Luciano and Leonardo Parcichini, two relatives of an Italian man, who, under the spell of mafia and chronic unemployment, became a fugitive with his wife and his two children, fleeing from one ghetto to the other, from one shanty town to the next; this was the story of his life from when he was ten up to the time he was thirty. This "tragic and comic family saga" is the reason why Solari dedicated the book to his family. In September 2008, Solari published his second autobiographic work, Gomorra, un paese, due repubbliche e un candidato, where he tells the story of
